- ➔ Localizes other sections of the site as needed
- ➔ Identifies, localizes and QAs all existing on-site content

BEST PRACTICES: WEBSITE LOCALIZATION + REDESIGN

Using the following design tips can reduce translation costs, and ensure an excellent UX for your localized website.

CREATE A GLOBAL-READY DESIGN

- ➔ To reduce design and translation costs, use text overlays for images (using a tool such as Adobe Dynamic/Scene 7) instead of embedding translatable text in flattened images
- ➔ Leverage responsive page design to mitigate post-translation misalignments on webpages
- ➔ Create page templates that define CSS styles globally to accommodate longer translated text

AUDIT YOUR REDESIGNED WEBSITE AND ASSETS

- ➔ Identify which sections of your redesigned website should be localized for global customers, and which can remain untranslated. This applies to omnichannel content, too.

MotionPoint's approach won't add to the complexity of your redesign project. It delivers high-quality, cost-effective translations and works with any code, technology or platform.
